PWRDF, with members of the Anglican Alliance, is supporting work of the Anglican Diocese of Jerusalem in five areas:

Al-Ahli Arab Hospital, Gaza

Support for 583 patients, 100 employees and 3,498 family members

Since October 7, 2023, Al-Ahli Hospital has suffered through bombing and sustained significant damage. In July 2024, the hospital was forced to close, leaving the sick, injured and those taking shelter in its grounds with nowhere safe to go. It has since reopened and established a mobile clinic, which itself has had to be on the move to escape continued violence. Medical personnel have served for many months under extreme conditions without pay and urgent medical supplies. The Diocese of Jerusalem shares the story of Ahmed, 35, one of the many patients severely wounded during an Israeli Defence Force military operation in Gaza. Ahmed underwent urgent surgery at Al-Ahli Hospital, where the medical team made every effort to save his leg. Thanks to their expertise and dedication, the operation was a success, and Ahmed received the necessary physical therapy to recover. The hospital provided all treatment and care, free of charge.

Penman Clinic, Zababdeh, Jenin, West Bank

Support for 101 patients and 505 family members

This clinic provides primary medical treatment to people of Zebabdeh and 12 surrounding villages at a time when travel restrictions make it difficult to reach other medical facilities. As well as offering medical treatment for low fees, it offers dental services, laboratory services, and a pharmacy, making it a uniquely comprehensive and vital resource for the region.

St. Luke's Hospital, Nablus, West Bank

Support for 693 patients, 150 employees and 3,490 family members

Ongoing violence, displacement, shortages, and travel restrictions have also affected communities in West Bank. St. Luke's hospital, founded in 1900, is the only charitable hospital in Nablus, a city of 350,000. The hospital provides accessible, comprehensive, quality care to those in need, and is particularly strong in neo-natal care. Yaser, a father of five, struggled to provide for his family after losing his job due to the war. When his youngest son, Saed, fell ill with a severe respiratory condition, the family turned to St. Luke's Hospital. The hospital provided Saed with necessary treatment, including medication and respiratory therapy, at no cost. Saed recovered, and Yaser, grateful for the hospital's care, offered his time and skills to help with repairs and maintenance of the hospital building.

The National Christian Kingergarten, Nablus, West Bank

Support for 25 students, eight employees and 125 family members

Since 1848, the CNK, based in St. Philip's Church, has been educating children from needy families in the city of Nablus and its environs. The school provides quality early childhood education with full coverage of tuition fees. Despite the challenges posed by the hostilities, the kindergarten has continued to operate, offering a safe environment for young children and stability within the community. Recently, the kindergarten welcomed Mustafa and Malak, fouryear-old twins who needed a supportive and stimulating environment. With the help of the kindergarten, the twins have begun to thrive, and their family has expressed gratitude for the support and care they have received during this time.

St. George's School, East Jerusalem

Support for 100 students, 67 employees and 500 family members

Established in 1899, this school serves 650 boys and girls today, offering an excellent education from kindergarten to grade 12 at affordable costs and fostering values of mutual respect and peace. PWRDF support helps to ensure that students can continue to attend at a time when some families may have difficulty paying for school fees.
